MANAGER'S COMMENTARY

April carried on March's trend with global markets having a relatively flat month despite increasing geopolitical instability and volatility in momentum stocks. The Greenchip fund outperformed, up about 2.6% in April.

The biggest news in environmental sectors, and for the Greenchip GEF fund specifically, was GE's interest in acquiring all or part of Greenchip's largest holding, Alstom. Acquiring Alstom would be a signature accomplishment of CEO Jeff Immelt, who since the financial crisis has attempted to return GE to its industrial origins while exiting commercial and financial businesses built by his predecessor Jack Welch. In GE's interest we see an endorsement of our belief in the long-term value of industrial assets — particularly in energy infrastructure — and, more specifically, the value of European multinational engineering firms whose businesses have been temporarily depressed. If Alstom's margins can be brought anywhere near those of GE, the acquisition will pay off handsomely. Much uncertainty remains, with the expected French political resistance materializing, and Siemens contemplating a competing bid.

We remain comfortable with our core holdings, primarily in firms with the capacity and know-how to improve the efficiency of the world's energy complex.
