MANAGER'S COMMENTARY

There seems to be little that concerns investors right now other than Federal Reserve tapering. In the past quarter the MSCI Global and Greenchip were up 5.4% and 9.5% respectively. This despite a near war in the middle-east, a budgetary crisis in the US, and slowing growth, particularly in emerging markets. Irrational exuberance is back.

Siemens, one of our holdings, recently announced layoffs of 15,000 workers. This was not a surprise to us and the announcement was already in the stock price. Siemens is a significant player in many of our sectors. But it is also a good bellwether on the broader economy and the layoffs are indicative of slowing industrial growth. That said, we are seeing a number of environmental sectors bucking this trend. For example, solar panel and LED lighting sales continue to exceed expectations. In the auto industry, cars utilizing more efficient technologies like stop-start ignition, regenerative braking and cleaner diesel engines are stealing market share from traditional gasoline powered vehicles.

Companies with effective industrial efficiency technologies are also finding strong demand. Primary Energy, the most recent addition to our portfolio is a good example of these efficiency opportunities. The company recovers heat from coking facilities and then sells both steam and electricity back to the adjacent steel companies. Primary Energy is currently renegotiating longer-term contracts with many of their customers, solidifying stronger cash flows. Trading activity in the portfolio last month was mostly rebalancing stocks that had outperformed.
