MANAGER'S COMMENTARY

Markets closed off a volatile year with a volatile final month. Nervousness was precipitated by the first US 'baby step' interest rate increase in 9 years. As was the case throughout 2015, global market volatility was masked for Canadian investors by the dramatic 20% drop in the value of the loonie vs the US dollar. In US dollar terms Global markets were slightly down both in December and in 2015 overall. Canadian investors also faced a brutal year in commodity prices led by a drop of 30% in the price of oil.

Despite weak energy markets and increased volatility, environmental sectors performed well in December and for the year as a whole. For the month the Clean Tech index and the Greenchip GEF both outperformed, led by healthy gains in renewable energy. The solar sector again generated significant news flow. China-based Trina Solar and JA Solar, two of Greenchip's larger holdings, were both the subject of take-private offers by their CEOs. In our estimation the premium and valuation implied were insufficient and we will not support either offer. We anticipate that these companies will remain public and the market will bid up prices as growth and margin expansion continue. This thesis was underscored in December both by global commitments to emissions controls at COP21 and by a US decision to extend important tax incentives for new solar plants.
