MANAGER'S COMMENTARY

In July global financial markets quickly looked past the Brexit turmoil of the previous month as well as the circus of the nomination conventions for the US presidential election candidates. Strong gains were attributed to the usual central bank support and initial indications of second quarter earnings beating (lowered) expectations. Environmental sectors outperformed even though benchmark energy commodities experienced a steep decline.

In the Greenchip portfolio our best gains were realized in European holdings. German water pump manufacturer KSB and power semiconductor company Infineon each enjoyed gains of approximately 20%. Philips Lighting, a position Greenchip initiated following its spin-off from parent Royal Philips, added 10% as it impressed with its first quarterly report as a stand-alone company. In North America, TSO₃, a small Canadian company with a novel ozone-based sterilization technology for hospital devices, rose more than 50% as the FDA approved expanded claims for its technology (for widely used multi-channel endoscopes). We haven't written about this holding in the past as it is different from the typical Greenchip investment, but we have held it since 2011. The technology will replace more toxic, energy-intensive, time-consuming, and much less effective current standard of care. Revenues are beginning to ramp up in earnest this year.
